Join us when Noah Bullock, Executive Director of Cristosal, discusses how a human rights-based approach, grounded in faith systems, informs work in El Salvador and with U.S. Policy. How are the systems of economics, migration, and violence connected between Central America and the U.S., and what can people of faith can do in response? A panel of local religious leaders will join the conversation to discuss some of the promise and challenges to implementing these strategies in the St. Louis area.

Cristosal is a nongovernmental organization working to advance human rights in Central America through rights-based research, learning, and programming.

10 | 08 | 18
6:00 – 7:30 p.m.
Umrah Lounge
Reception immediately following

RSVPs appreciated to rap@wustl.edu or (314) 935-9345

More info: rap.wustl.edu